VII Annual Public Lecture Series

The VII Annual Public Lecture Series, ILNU was delivered by distinguished legal scholar, Prof. Upendra Baxi, Professor of Law, Warwick Law School UK on 7th July 2014. The paradoxically titled talk "The Human Right to do a Moral Wrong" highlighted the fissiparous debate over human rights in contemporary narratology. The contemporary polemics surrounding Human Rights discourse have hailed 'the age of rights'. The narratives revolved around from 'human rights of conflict' to 'human rights in conflict', from the 'politics of human rights' to the 'politics in human rights'. Prof. Baxi's erudite address evoked a lot of interaction from faculty members and students of ILNU.

respects them. You are powerless and lawless once if you show disrespect”.

Hon’ble Mr. Justice A.K.Patnaik, Judge (Retd) Supreme Court of India, delivered a lecture “Independent versus Committed Judiciary: Prospects of Judicial Appointment Commission” on 1st August 2014 at ILNU. He opened his speech with a reference to Dr. B. R Ambedkar, “Dr. B.R.Ambedkar who we know as the Father of the Indian Constitution believed that the Judiciary must be independent and that it should be competent.” Justice Patnaik then talked about the Article 124(2), Article 217 (1) and also Article 121 of the Indian Constitution and how it has impacted the current situation by citing various case laws. The event was well-received with the participation of the Bar, Judges, Professionals and Students.

Mr. Murli Neelakanthan, Global General Counsel at Cipla Ltd. delivered a lecture on “The Industry-relevant Legal Education”. The lecture dealt with how the legal education and its knowledge is a valued necessity for industries and companies. The scope of legal education in industrial field and the vast spreading span in the same was also showcased in the lecture. It provided students with clarity about the field and a specialization alternative.

Dr. Mohan Gopal, Director, Rajiv Gandhi Institute of Contemporary Studies, delivered a lecture “Role of Legal Professionals in Nation Building”. He showcased how in the modern world the role of legal professionals has expanded in scope in the better building of the society.

Prof. K.N. Chandrasekhran Pillai, Former Director, Indian Law Institute and Honorary Chair Professor of The Centre for Criminal Law and Justice of the Institute delivered a talk on ‘Constitutionalizing the Criminal Law in India’. Prof Pillai said that the constitution being the mother statute of all the legislations should be the guiding beacon for the justice delivery mechanism. He also identified the interest of fundamental rights as an eminent part of criminal justice system and linked it with relevant case laws. He concluded the lecture by laying emphasis on the need for transparency and ensuring speedy trial of cases as it the biggest backlog for the Indian judiciary and gave clear insight to students about the same.

Prof N.S Soman, Director, School of Legal Studies, CUSAT, Kerala spoke on the contentious topic, Right to die: A Corollary to the Right to Life. The lecture revolved around the question whether Right to Die should be incorporated under article 21 right to life and personal liberty or not. He talked about section 309, IPC i.e. attempt to suicide and also if it should be criminalized as an amendment to the section is much awaited. The contentious topic of Euthanasia was also discussed in the light of two of the most discussed cases of Gian Kaur v state of Punjab and Aruna Shanbaug relating to wilful termination of one’s life.

Prof Soman also delivered a lecture to Semester IX students on ‘Regional Implementation of Human Rights: European Commission on Human Rights’ on August 20, 2014.

LAW AND LITERATURE: A PEDAGOGICAL LIAISON

A unique combination of literature and law was witnessed in the form of performance of a play "Antigone" by the revered Greek playwright Sophocles on the Institute's Foundation Day. This was part of Institute's clinical activity for the Semester I students, under the Law and Literature course.

The law and literature movement focusses on the interdisciplinary connection between the two seemingly different fields of study. Understanding Antigone for a law student is concerned with the perspective of 'Law in

ACTIVITIES

Literature' and also enables to understand the enduring contemporary issues through the manner in which they are explored in the great literary texts.

The play depicted the true nature of a man and implores to adopt ethical principles that will help the students become socially responsible lawyers. It also helps the students grasp concepts taught in the classroom and also enhance analytical and rhetorical skills which are useful in decision-making.
