SUMMER INTERNSHIP SNAPSHOT

Summer Internships 2024 explore Hybrid work culture

In 2024, the workplace culture has undergone profound changes in response to the enduring effects of COVID-19. Remote work has become widely accepted and integrated into business operations, with many companies adopting hybrid models that offer flexibility to employees.

This shift has not only normalized remote work but also accelerated digital transformation efforts across industries. Organizations have invested heavily in digital tools and platforms to facilitate seamless collaboration and communication among remote teams.

Physical office spaces have been reimagined to accommodate hybrid work setups, focusing on creating safe and collaborative environments for those who choose to work on-site.

Leadership styles have evolved to prioritize empathy, adaptability, and inclusivity, reflecting a shift towards more resilient and agile organizational structures. Overall, these changes illustrate a transformative period where workplaces have adapted to new norms, leveraging technology and flexible policies to thrive in a post-pandemic world.

At IMNU, we for the first time explored the concept of hybrid working in our summer internship programme. Surely students got to experience a whole new concept and go through the new normal. It was few in numbers to explore the new working culture.

Not only the internship but also the process of recruitment was done through technologically advanced tools to have a seamless process of recruiting and onboarding students
