Guided by ICNU faculty and experts, students gained valuable insights into the historical significance of these monuments, fostering a deeper appreciation for Ahmedabad's role as a UNESCO World Heritage City. This educational excursion provided students with a meaningful connection to the city, enriching their understanding of local history and culture as they begin their academic journey.

Paralles between Entrepreneurship and Politics

Strength lies in serving society to essentially understand the deep issues. Entrepreneurship and politics, both fields create massive sparks of creativity, inspired actions and growth in society. As a result of the consistent mental and intellectual expansion that can be experienced by being a part of these ever-evolving fields, it becomes necessary to connect some adjacent dots to fully understand a prospective growth path.

Politics, emerges from a basic idea of what is culturally, economically, geopolitically good for a society according to the people in power. However, now, the responsibility of truly understanding and making good decisions rest with the public also specifically, the youth of India; who, in reality, possessthe potential to conglomerate the vast interests of entrepreneurship and politics. On the other hand, Entrepreneurship aims to monetize a possible solution to an existing or budding problem, hence creating a market based on the same. A cognitive consonance happens here, in the minds of the youth ,which is a result of the concrete foundations that the Basic Ideologies both of these fields offer, mentally and emotionally. The glides of uncertainty and criticism that comes as a part of this endeavor, forces the entrepreneur to embrace and believe in uncertainty and criticism. The same is seen in politics as well, in terms of providing solutions to different problems of the society and facing uncertainty and criticisms by the opposition and public, at large. Additionally, the idea of solving a problem as a collaborative effort, in the current time frame serves as a mainstream theme of both the fields. The active engagement of the youth on social media to either respond to a new scheme or solution proposed by the government or to purchase more customizable products or services, disclosing their preferences, loud and clear. Both of these realms requiresa person to see the world from a broad-minded, optimistic, unbiased and receptive perspective. This helps in creating ripples in the minds of people in terms of some perceptual change, that is the inspiration which paves its way, stemming from responsibility.

Although, this mere thought of drawing parallels between politics and entrepreneurship might serve as a know-how of capitalism in governance, in different countries. However, in my opinion the notion of capitalism finds its horizons broader, when clubbed with people profoundly than just profits. The very emergence of the word “People” in both realms creates nothing but a convergence amongst the paths of these fields. This outlook is a lot futuristic in action for some people but its potential feels quite imminent.

Poster-making competition won by Vidhi Singhal (Sem III) and Dipshikha Adhikari (Sem III). This was followed by classroom visits, where the committee clarified the UGC-defined ragging rules and encouraged students to take an anti-ragging pledge, reinforcing a safe and respectful campus culture. The campaign also included an audio-visual presentation attended by 180 students, showcasing UGC-approved anti-ragging commercials, short films, and documentaries.

Showcasing UGC-approved anti-ragging commercials, short films, and documentaries. This emphasized the severe consequences of ragging and highlighted the university's commitment to a safe, inclusive environment. The week concluded with a theatre play that powerfully depicted the emotional and psychological impact of ragging. Attended by 90 students, the performance was a poignant reminder of empathy and respect, earning performers participation certificates. These initiatives demonstrated the institution's dedication to creating a nurturing and ragging-free academic atmosphere.

FRESHERS' 2024

The Freshers' event of 2024, held on August 13 at the grand C Auditorium with a "Classic Hollywood" theme, welcomed 450 new students to ICNU with an evening of fun, bonding, and creativity. Organized by Kalanidhi under the mentorship of Dr. CS Karishma Butani and student coordinator Charu Ameta. The night featured dazzling performances, games like "What's in the Box," a Hollywood quiz, impromptu dances, the Mr. and Ms. Fresher contest where won by Ram Gaur (Sem I) and Pavitra Bhandari (Sem I), while Manvendra Singh Solanki (Sem I) and Khanak Bhabani (Sem I) won the titles of Mr. and Ms. Classic, embodying the elegance of the Hollywood theme. It concluded with a lively DJ session, celebrating the start of a vibrant campus life for the freshers.

“The image feels like the view of someone living behind bars, where the net looks like prison bars. The crescent moon and the sunset offer a small glimpse of freedom—something they can see but cannot reach. The colors of the sky, moving from dark blue to orange, reflect a mix of feelings: the sadness of being trapped and the hope for better days.

For those confined, moments like watching the moon or the sky become their only connection to the outside world. It reminds them that, even though they are stuck, the beauty of nature is still there for them to see. The glowing windows of the buildings below show a world where people live freely, making the longing for freedom even stronger.”

The day concluded with the distribution of trophies, certificates, and a celebration of the institute's progress and aspirations for the future.

It's life
It will tear you down yet pick u up
It will teach u to work hard
But sometimes
Will shower u with luck
It's life
It will bring new strangers in your journey
Only to let the ones u need stay
And wrath away the ones for whom u pray
It's life
It will leave u stranded on a road
But in front of a door to hope.
There will be days u hate it and days u love it
As life's nothing but a magical cycle that u can never elope.

NSS One Day Camp

On November 16, 2024, the NSS Unit of Institute of Commerce, Nirma University, organized a one-day camp at Naj Village, Gujarat. The camp engaged 50 students, including NSS committee members and volunteers under the guidance of Dr. Pranav Saraswat in a series of community-oriented activities such as a village survey, a visit to a school for differently-abled children, storytelling sessions, and an art competition for young students. Teams of volunteers conducted a detailed survey in groups of 5-6, focusing on healthcare access, education facilities, safety concerns, living standards, and income sources. Another team visited the Divyang school to understand the challenges faced by differently-abled students and explore ways to support them. Survey findings revealed that while villagers are cooperative and value education, the local school only offers classes up to grade 8, prompting families to send children to nearby villages for higher studies. Notably, many elderly villagers have completed education up to the 10th grade, reflecting their emphasis on learning. The camp highlighted the NSS Unit's commitment to fostering community engagement and addressing rural challenges through meaningful interventions.

Talent on the Move: Inside the Brain Drain Phenomenon of India

Visualise a country rich in talented individuals, nurturing countless scientists, engineers, entrepreneurs and more, having the vast potential pivotal for making a change in the world we see today. At the same time, imagine these individuals packing their bags, and hoping on planes with a one way ticket to other nations, as soon as they are ready to use their skills, knowledge and potential in their individual professional fields in India. This phenomenon involving departure of educated and professional people to other nations in search of better pay or living conditions known as 'brain drain' or the migration of brilliant minds has been a constant trend. India's future continues to experience the detrimental effects of the steady outflow of some of its most intellectual and entrepreneurial minds, as they choose to abandon the nation and look for greener pastures abroad. Brain drain can be narrated as a story of opportunity, desire, and at times, frustration rather than just an ongoing trend. The motivation behind this, is usually due to factors such as better research facilities, greater income and a lifestyle that India potentially cannot offer. So while it is an undeniable fact that this voyage provides these people with a brighter future, it must also be implored that this squander of potential in India is beyond deprivation of its elite minds and actually a considerable damage to its development.

India's job market faces a cut-throat competition due to an oversupply of graduates and inadequate specialized roles to cater to their needs which ultimately leaves them in vexation. Many young professionals end up feeling stuck in fields with limited growth opportunities, eventually pushing them to explore for better employment prospects in other countries. Countries like the United States and Canada offer a hefty income which is often two or three times more than what is available in India along with better working conditions. For professionals like scientists, engineers, and doctors, developed countries provide better opportunities to grow and excel in their respective fields, owing to advanced technological facilities and focus on innovation. These nations also offer safer environments, efficient healthcare systems, and a healthy work-life balance. These financial benefits, coupled with improved standards of living, make moving abroad an appealing option for many Indians and lure them to utilize their talent in those countries. However, this migration of skilled workforce from India to abroad has a detrimental impact on India's development. Every professional who leaves India represents a lost opportunity in critical areas such as healthcare, technology, and scientific research. Without their expertise, India finds it harder to keep up with global advancements and tackle important challenges. The brain drain also weakens pivotal sectors of the economy, including IT, education, and healthcare. The loss of talented individuals reduces the quality and availability of essential services, directly deteriorating the standard of living of millions.

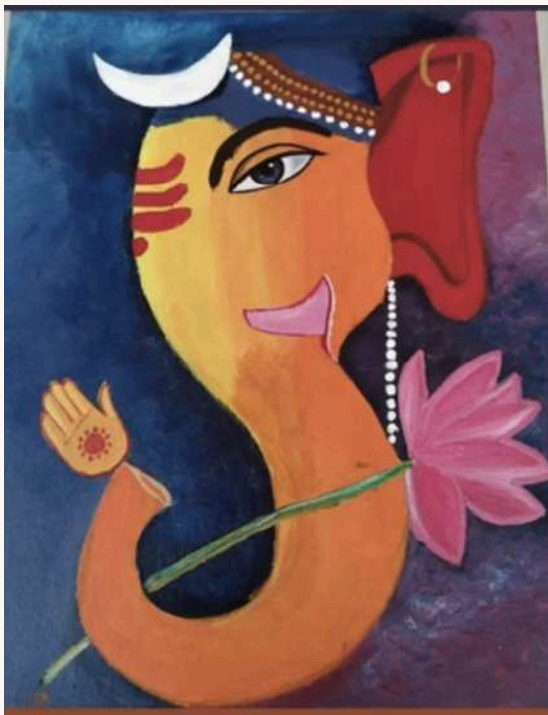

Additionally, India becomes increasingly reliant on foreign countries to fill this gap, which is both costly and limits the growth of local talent which hampers the self sufficiency of the Indian economy. The impact of brain drain is an alarming concern for the economy as a whole as this hampers the economic progress of the country and slows down the transition of India from a developing to a developed economy.

To address the issue of brain drain and its adverse impact on India's progress, appropriate policies must be implemented that allow skilled individuals to thrive within the country.

A multimodal strategy needs to be in action, beginning with investments in high-demand industries like technology and healthcare. Establishing cutting-edge facilities can lead to innovations that are at par with developed countries. Improving working conditions and compensating with an adequate salary is essential to make these individuals stay. Individuals who have previously relocated may benefit from strong steps to encourage their return, such as tax breaks, possibilities for growth, and access to key positions. Furthermore, developing a supportive entrepreneurial ecosystem can boost job creation and attract foreign investment, providing competent workers with opportunities to advance while contributing to the economy. Addressing structural concerns such as infrastructure development, urban safety, and healthcare quality might increase India's appeal as a place to live and do business. By taking these actions, India can retain its brightest minds, ensuring that their talents fuel innovation and propel the country ahead into a more flourishing future for the country. Promoting diversity and inclusion in the workplace is equally important for creating an environment in which all employees feel appreciated and motivated to succeed. Finally, international partnership in research and development can provide access to global expertise while prioritizing India's growth.

INDUSTRIAL VISIT

Industrial Visit to GIFT CITY, Gandhinagar

On November 20-21, 2024, third-year students of the Institute of Commerce, Nirma University, visited Gujarat International Finance Tec-City (GIFT IFSC) in Gandhinagar coordinated by Dr. Sumita Shroff. The visit provided insights into India's first operational smart city and financial hub, showcasing its role in attracting foreign investments, fostering innovation, and driving economic growth. Students explored GIFT City's advanced waste management system, featuring eco-friendly technology for waste collection, segregation, and processing, emphasizing sustainability and efficiency. The trip offered a practical understanding of urban planning, financial systems, and sustainable practices, bridging academic knowledge with real-world applications. The Institute sincerely thanks GIFT City's management for their insightful sessions and hospitality. The students were accompanied by Dr. Avani Shah and Dr. CS Karishma Butani.

Industrial Visit to AmulFed Dairy, Ahmedabad

The students of Semester 1, had the opportunity to visit AmulFed Dairy in Hansol, Ahmedabad, on the 13th and 14th of November, 2024, under the guidance of their faculty coordinator, Dr. Sumita Shroff. AmulFed Dairy, being one of the largest and most advanced dairy processing units in Asia, offered the students a unique insight into the operational dynamics of large-scale milk processing and packaging. Students were briefed on the cooperative model that forms the backbone of Amul's operations, emphasizing its role in empowering farmers and fostering rural prosperity. Throughout the visit, students were taken on a detailed tour of various production units, including the milk packaging plant and facilities for producing skimmed milk powder, flavored milk, and ice creams. The advanced automated systems in place at the dairy ensured minimal human intervention, thereby maintaining high standards of hygiene and efficiency. Additionally, the students were informed about the dairy's strong commitment to environmental sustainability, which includes initiatives such as wastewater recycling and the installation of solar panels. AmulFed Dairy's dedication to farmer welfare and community development was also highlighted, leaving the students with a profound understanding of the social and economic impact of the cooperative. The students were accompanied by Dr. Hridayraj Bharti and Prof. Gopika Juneja.

Logos usually fall into eight different types:

- Wordmark (Logotype): These logos focus on text and typography, using the company name in a unique font. Examples like Coca-Cola, eBay, and Google emphasize brand identity through distinctive word designs.
- Brand Mark (Logomark or Pictorial): These logos use a visual symbol or image, often without text, such as Apple's apple or Twitter's bird. They are simple, iconic, and easily recognizable.
- Combination Mark: A blend of text and imagery, combination marks are versatile. Brands like Adidas and Starbucks use these logos for flexible representation across platforms.
- Dynamic Logo: Flexible and adaptable, these logos change elements based on context while retaining core identity. MTV is a popular example of dynamic logo.
- Emblems: Emblem logos combine text and imagery in a unified design resembling badges or crests. BMW and Starbucks use emblems to convey tradition and prestige.
- Letterforms: Using a single letter or character, these logos are simple yet striking. Examples include Facebook's "F" and McDonald's "M."
- Lettermark (Monogram): Comprising initials or acronyms, lettermarks like Chanel's interlocking C's or IBM's block letters are sophisticated and compact.
- Mascots: Featuring a character or mascot, these logos build relatability. Examples include KFC's Colonel Sanders and Lacoste's crocodile.
